BRIBERY IN ELWELL

Thwarted Investigators Seek Explanation of Alleged Promises to Individuals.

HINTS OF BLACKMAIL

Shevlin Still Follows Bootleg' Angle of the Murder Mystery.

With the investigation into the mur der of Joseph Bowne Elwell blocked at virtually every turn, with the District Attorney's office and the police at the end of their trail and no culprit in sight, a story reached official ears last night to the effect that efforts of the investigators have been thwarted by bribery of persons who could clear away the nystery if they would. The story contains both names and mstances to warrant a belief in it, nd it is generally credited by persons who have been watching the official inquiry at close range. It may result within the next few days in the insti-tution of another investigation for the purpose of ascertaining the identity of the person who is behind it. Several rsons may be called upon by the officlais to furnish an explanation surce of money that they have had in their possession recently and to tell what promises, if any, have been made regarding their futures.

nors of this sort in connection with the Elwell case have been current in certain quarters for several days and there has been much speculation as to she was doing the bribing and who was being shielded. There also has been in freulation a rumor to the effect that two or three persons know who committed the murder and are keeping that knowledge to themselves with a view ing the murderer.

persons interested in the investi-that until this phase has been pended sentences. among persons interested in the investified to the bottom there is little or no chance of any development in the case. The "bootlegging" clues which indisted that Elwell had been slain in a quarrel over a transaction in whiskey, innumerable women clues which caused many persons to believe that slousy or revenge had been the motive for the slaying, and the stories of turf and card quarrels which might have led to the murder, all have been run down without any success whatever for the

DOG FIGHT CAUSES FATHER TO KILL SON

Shot Sent at Animal Pierces Young Man's Heart.

A dog fight caused the death yesterday of George Ceravallo, 21 years old, who was shot by his father, Frank Ce-ravallo, a baker, of Nutley, N. J. One dog in the battle was owned by the effer Ceravallo and the other animal John Furnari, a barber, his friend. The barber, in trying to stop the canine contest, struck Ceravalle's dog and some epithets followed.

Beorge Ceravallo told his father to go fuside and leave the argument to him. The father went into the house and got a revolver. Meanwhile the son had been pushed into the doorway by Furnari, but his father, thinking the dogs were getting into the hall, fired a shot from revolver, the bullet going through Ma son's heart.

The elder Ceravallo was arrested on a charge of murder

Roshore, according to Capt, Carey, told of how he had met Gabin and had several drinks with him-at the Spanfard's restaurant at 573 Washington street, and then had gone with him to see his new restaurant and home at 770 Washington street. The men went to hed early in the morning. As soon as Gabin fell asleep, Capt. Carey said, Ro shore pulled a revolver from under his illow, placed it close to his friend's ody and fired. Gabin awoke, lifted his hands, gasped "You?" and died. Roshore is then said to have dressed. taken the money and jewelry from the dead man's clothes and left the house. One of the rings he took was left to be reset at a jeweler's and another, Capt. Carey said, Roshore told him he paned to a manleure girl, a friend This was a mistake, for it was this girl ho came forward when "Handsome Charlle's" name was mentioned in the murder story and told of the ring to the police. After outfitting himself at a department store Roshore went to a Broadway dancing place and there met a girl whose name he gave to Capt. Carey. They became friends at once, he said, so he bought two trunks and some clothes for the girl. She told him she was an actress and was anxious to get back to her home in Minneapolis.
